Tehran: Hormuz Stays Shut Until Seven Conditions Met

- Parliament speaker Mohammad Baqer Qalibaf said on Sunday the Strait of Hormuz "will not be opened until our seven conditions, based on the Islamabad Memorandum of Understanding, are met" — adding that "the period of dragging out the process and dictating one-sided demands is over." — Reuters
- Qalibaf spoke days after Tehran received Washington's reply to its proposal via a mediator — the Qatari-mediated channel that has been shuttling the two sides' positions back and forth. — Reuters
- Foreign Minister Abbas Araqchi, addressing foreign diplomats in Tehran on Sunday, said Iran's plan could reopen the strait within seven days if the United States accepts it: "We hope Washington would choose diplomacy." — Reuters
- Araqchi warned that "if they again move towards military solutions, we are more prepared than before and will take whatever action is necessary to defend ourselves" — hardening Tehran's line even as the mediation channel stays open. — Reuters

Shipping

- About 13.1 million barrels per day of crude and refined products flowed through the Strait of Hormuz in the seven days ending September 28 — just under 80 percent of the prewar baseline of 17.1 million, per Kpler data. — CNN
- Kpler's reconstruction includes vessels that transited with their AIS transponders switched off — so the 13.1 million figure captures "dark" transits the military-escorted shuttle fleet has been running. — CNN
