Another Tanker Struck in the Strait of Hormuz

- UKMTO said Sunday that a tanker in the Strait of Hormuz was struck by an unknown projectile, damaging its engine room; the crew was reported safe and no environmental impact was reported. — Wall Street Journal
- Seven vessel attacks have been reported around the strait since September 28, even as Gulf producers pushed crude shipments back toward prewar levels using shuttle tankers and alternative export routes. — Wall Street Journal
- Saudi Arabia's crude shipments through the strait climbed from about 1.4 million barrels a day in late August to about 4.1 million a day last week, and the kingdom's East-West pipeline has returned to flows of about 5.5 million barrels a day, per Kpler ship-tracking data. — Wall Street Journal

Mecca Pact Committee Convenes in Riyadh

- A committee of the Mecca defence pact between Turkey, Saudi Arabia and Pakistan held talks in Riyadh on Monday, with Turkish Foreign Minister Hakan Fidan, Defence Minister Yasar Guler and the chief of the general staff attending alongside Saudi and Pakistani officials, per the Turkish foreign ministry. — Reuters
- The meeting addressed recent regional developments, a day after the leader of Yemen's Saudi-backed government announced the start of a major military operation against the Houthis. — Reuters
- Pakistan's foreign minister said Friday that Iran had suggested engaging the Houthis politically rather than with kinetic action, an idea the pact's committee would discuss, and that Iran's president and foreign minister both want the matter concluded. — Reuters

Iran Executes Two More January-Protest Detainees

- Iran executed two men arrested over the January protests in Isfahan on Monday morning, the judiciary's Mizan news agency reported: Alireza Sepahi and Alireza Raeisi, sentenced in connection with the deaths of four police officers. — Reuters
- Mizan said both were convicted on charges including membership in an armed rebel group, waging war against God through carrying weapons, corruption on earth, and incitement to war and killing, and that the Supreme Court upheld their sentences. — Reuters

Trump Rejects Iranian Offer, Expects Talks This Week

- President Trump told reporters Sunday he had rejected Iran's proposal, a ceasefire and strait reopening in exchange for sanctions relief and unfrozen funds, and claimed the US had taken 'a record amount of oil out of the Hormuz Strait' the night before. — The Times \(London\)
- Trump told Axios he expects talks to resume this week, saying Iran 'overplayed their hand,' while Treasury Secretary Bessent said on Fox News Sunday that 'the straits are open,' claiming flows are averaging 15 to 22 million barrels a day. — The Times \(London\)

- Iranian parliament speaker Qalibaf said Sunday the Strait of Hormuz will not reopen until seven Iranian conditions from the June Islamabad Memorandum of Understanding are met; Foreign Minister Araqchi said Tehran's plan could reopen the strait within seven days if accepted, and warned Iran is 'more prepared than before' if the US chooses military action. — Reuters

G-7 Moves Ahead With 100-Million-Barrel Stock Release

- The G-7 agreed Friday to a coordinated IEA release of 100 million barrels of crude and fuel over four months, including a substantial diesel release in the first 20 days, and pledged not to restrict energy exports between members. — Wall Street Journal
- December Brent futures fell 1.9 percent Monday to $100.32 a barrel and December WTI slid 1.8 percent to $89.43, with Brent settling lower for three of the past five trading sessions. — Wall Street Journal
- The US released 800,000 barrels of crude from the Strategic Petroleum Reserve last week; the reserve holds 283 million barrels, the lowest level since October 1982. — Wall Street Journal
- Saudi Aramco cut the official selling price for November shipments of Arab Light crude to Asia by $3 a barrel, widening its discount to the Oman/Dubai benchmark to $5 a barrel, as crude flows through Hormuz continue to recover. — Wall Street Journal
- Seven OPEC+ members including Saudi Arabia and Russia agreed Sunday to keep November production levels steady; OPEC's monitoring committee separately voiced concern over attacks on energy infrastructure and disruptions to international maritime routes. — Wall Street Journal

Markets

- Brent futures were quoted at $100.21 a barrel in the October 5 read; Reuters' same-day coverage notes Brent holding above $100 a barrel as the G-7 reserve-release decision weighed on prices. — Reuters
- WTI futures were quoted at $89.21 a barrel in the October 5 read; Reuters' same-day market coverage described crude sliding on the G-7's 100-million-barrel release plan and rising Middle East exports. — Reuters
