

US–Iran Conflict Briefing

2026-10-10 · Evening edition · Issued 20:00 CDT

Riyadh airport strike aftermath

- Saudi Arabia's civil aviation authority said Sunday that Saturday's missile attack on King Khalid International Airport killed at least 12 people and wounded 309, and warned the toll was not final. The dead included four Saudi nationals, two Bangladeshis, and one national each from the United States, Egypt, Jordan, Syria, Sudan, and Palestine. — CNN
- The missiles landed direct hits on Terminals 3 and 4, causing extensive damage, with parts of the roof falling on people inside the airport, Saudi officials said. — WSJ
- The airport was evacuated and operations were temporarily suspended while damage is assessed; Saturday-afternoon arrivals were canceled or delayed across the board, and Riyadh-bound flights were diverted to Dammam and Jeddah. — WSJ
- The strike came without warning: Saudi Arabia's threat-warning system issued no alert before the missiles landed, and the wounded were evacuated by ambulance and helicopter, with several in critical condition. — CNN

U.S. weighs joining Saudi strikes

- President Trump told reporters outside the White House on Saturday that the United States may join Saudi strikes on the Houthis, saying: "We may. We're going to look at it. We just found out about the recent attack, so we'll make a decision. We move very quickly." — WSJ
- The U.S. Embassy in Riyadh said it was aware of the attacks on King Khalid International Airport on October 10 and strongly recommended all U.S. citizens avoid the airport and surrounding areas. — CNN

Attribution dispute and regional spillover

- As of Saturday evening there was no verified direct Houthi claim of responsibility for Saturday's strike, although the group had claimed the two earlier airport attacks this week. After the strike, the Houthi military spokesman retweeted his own pre-attack post saying only pre-approved humanitarian flights were allowed to land at the airport, adding the words "a reminder." — CNN
- The Saudi-led coalition said a projectile fell near King Fahd International Airport in Dammam, in Saudi Arabia's Eastern Region, an airport that has become a key alternative to Riyadh while King Khalid is closed. — CNN

Conflict map

Markers show reported strike sites, bases, and shipping areas. Purple polygons mark approximate or announced closure / exclusion zones.

Sources: CNN · WSJ

Compiled from X posts and traditional news outlets. Verify before acting on any single report.